This program has been financially supported by the William L. Riggle Memorial Trauma Nurse Education Fund.

After my father passed away in June, 2003, I decided to establish a Trauma Nurse Education Fund to memorialize his life rather than dwell in his passing. My father always supported my intellectual and professional endeavors. He was important in making me the person I am. His generosity throughout his life indeed helped shape my desire to give. – Karl P. Riggle, M.D.

Presenters:

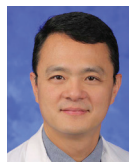

Jennifer Knight, M.D.

Dr. Knight is an associate professor, department of surgery and associate trauma director of the Jon Michael Moore Trauma Center, West Virginia University School of Medicine. Dr. Knight received her medical degree from West Virginia University with a surgical critical care fellowship at the R. Adams Cowley Shock Trauma Center, University of Maryland. Dr. Knight's interests include acute care surgery, which involves trauma surgery, surgical critical care, emergency general surgery and elective general surgery. She also is the only provider at WVU who places diaphragmatic pacemakers for diaphragm paralysis and operative fixations of rib fractures.

John S. Oh, M.D., FACS

Dr. Oh served for 20 years in the U.S. Army beginning as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Cavalry at Fort Carson, Co. upon graduation from the United States Military Academy at West Point, NY in 1993. After completing medical school at N.Y. Medical College on the Army Health Professions Scholarship in 1998, he completed a residency in general surgery at the William Beaumont Army Medical Center. He then served as an Army general surgeon, completing tours in Korea, Afghanistan and Iraq. Dr. Oh completed a fellowship in surgical critical care at the San Antonio Uniformed Services Health Education Consortium in 2010.

Dr. Oh was then assigned as the trauma medical director at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center. Landstuhl was recognized as the first overseas Level 1 trauma center verified by the American College of Surgeons. Dr. Oh oversaw delivery of urgent surgical and critical care for all U.S., NATO, and allied combat and non-combat casualties from Afghanistan, Iraq, Europe, and Africa. He also served as a critical care physician on the U.S. Air Force Acute Lung Injury team with the capability of rapidly deploying extra-corporeal lung support to trauma and medical casualties in combat zones within Afghanistan and Iraq.

Dr. Oh was then assigned to Walter Reed National Military Medical Center in Bethesda, Md. where he led the general surgery service, which included trauma, colorectal, minimally invasive, pediatric, and oncologic surgery. During this time, he also served as the director of the division for global surgery at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences.

After retiring from active military service, Dr. Oh was assigned in July 2017 to the Hershey Medical Center as a trauma and acute care surgeon where he maintains an active clinical practice and serves as the director for the SICU and the Surgical Critical Care program.

His notable accomplishments include the Soldier's Medal for Heroism, the Bronze Star Medal, and the Army Hero of Military Medicine Award.

Maureen Scarboro, CRNP

Maureen Scarboro is an acute care nurse practitioner in the department of shock trauma neurosurgery at R. Adams Cowley Shock Trauma Center since 2016. Prior to this, she worked as an acute care nurse practitioner in surgical traumatology at the Shock Trauma Center. Her nursing background includes neurotrauma critical care and acute care. She received a Bachelor of Science in Biology from the University of Vermont, a Bachelor of Science in Nursing from Towson University in 1995 and a Master of Science in Nursing in 2014. Her research interests include traumatology, traumatic brain injury and spinal cord injury.

Michelle Willis, ACNP

Michelle Willis is the clinical program manager and lead for Shock Trauma Care at R. Adams Crowley Shock Trauma Center. She obtained an M.S.N. in acute care from the University of Maryland. Michelle has been in her role for almost 20 years and part of over 70 nurse practitioners and physician assistants within the Shock Trauma Center.

She personally manages 25 nurse practitioners and physician assistants in the areas of emergency surgery, trauma team, soft tissue and trauma plastic surgery. She is also a Reiki Master, and is currently working on a certification as a Yoga instructor.
